

Mandatory Field Changes and Revisions

When an inspector determines that the Self-Certified plans contain code violations or are missing critical information, the inspector shall get a second opinion from his or her supervisor prior to requiring the customer to make changes. The supervisor is also encouraged to contact the Building Official for further discussion if necessary.

If the item is confirmed to be a code violation or requires more information critical to ensuring the project meets the building code, the Building Official or department staff will inform the Contractor and the Self-Certified Professional in writing (e-mail sufficient). Corrections and/or additional information will be required to reach a resolution.

1. Simple items can be handled in the field without revised plans based on the determination of the Inspector and/or the Building Official.
2. More complex violations require revised plans, but the plans can be submitted to the inspector using the Field Plan Review Policy. The plans must be self-certified by the Self-Certified Professional and any structural changes must be approved by a Nevada licensed structural peer reviewer. Please note that areas of work in violation to the code may be halted during the revision process until all required information is submitted.
3. Violations that require major design changes will require an audit of the self-certified plans.

Regardless of the method used to resolve the violation, all violations will be tracked by the Inspection Staff. The violations will be noted identifying the code section and a clear description of the violation. These will then be scored in accordance with the Department's Self-Certified Audit Procedures, any project that accumulates a cumulative score of five (5) or greater will be subject to a mandatory Audit. Refer to Self-Certified Audit Procedures.

The Self-Certified Professional has the right to request a second opinion from the Building Official or the Plans Examiner associated with the review discipline(s). Written request for a second opinion must be provided to the Building Department within 48 hours of being notified of the need to address a construction concern. The Building Official will review the concerns with the Inspection staff and meet with the Self-Certified Professional to discuss the building code requirements.

If it is determined that a full audit is required, a revised plan review will be created and notes must be provided by staff (Inspection) that document the specific code sections and identify the information needed. Revised plans will be logged in under the revision number.
